The Pink Pagoda: One Man's Quest To End Gendercide In China

Synopsis

In The Pink Pagoda, Dr. James Garrow tells two stories: his personal involvement in helping rescue more than 36,000 Chinese baby girls from death, and the tragic story of a widely used and malicious cultural practice that crosses borders and spans centuries. Transitioning from reluctant participant in an off-the-books adoption program to a visible champion for the rights of these babies whose parents wished to set them aside, Garrow's story parallels our own. Most Westerners are only vaguely aware of the extent to which China's one-baby-per-household restriction has played out in that country and around the world and what they can do to stop it.

Dr. James Garrow is the founder and executive director of the Bethune Institute's Pink Pagoda schools, private English-immersion schools for Chinese children. Today he runs 168 schools with nearly 6,300 employees. Garrow has spent over $25 million over the past sixteen years rescuing an estimated 40,000 baby Chinese girls from near-certain death under China's one-child-per-couple policy by facilitating international adoptions.

I understand that things could not be published in this book, but I wish there had been more about the outcomes of these adoptions - whether the girls are ok or not. I have to give him a lot of credit for finding homes for these girls - they deserve a chance to live and be happy. Less on the money involved and his going against Chinese laws and more about the kids would have been nice. I just expected more from this book and was disappointed.

Just finished the book. It was excellent. Opened my eyes to what has been going on in China regarding the children. Shame on the Nobel Prize people for giving the president the prize when obviously this man should have been chosen. He has done something of which to be very proud. The girls will thank him one of these days when they are older and realize he saved their lives.

very well written and interesting

China is finally getting rid of this lousy 1 child law ,,,,,,, now u can have 2 ,,,,,,,,,, Excellent book. Well written and very inspiring

Saints in this day and age are all too rare. And it is refreshing to get an in depth view of one man and his team rescuing thousands of baby girls in China. It is just like Jesus said, His sheep will know His voice. Those who are not his sheep in no way can listen. But we know because we recognize the pattern of love in Dr. Garrow's work which is Jesus voice. If someone were going to be arrogant and brag about glorious things, they never choose something like their work for orphans, but rather their latest sexual conquests. The critics here err greatly. The detractors to this work are mostly anti Christian or white house operatives paid with our tax dollars to discredit their enemies on the web.

This book gives the reader a good view of interrelationships and values of Chinese people as they interact with their Western contacts. The book is written with an easy to read style as Dr. Garrow offers a revealing view into his inner soul.

This really opened my eyes to what is happening in China. I admired his enormous efforts and successes in helping parents get their baby girls adopted. Awful to think of what happens to the millions he could not reach.
