SHELLEY GILL was the fifth woman to complete the Iditarod race. When she's not writing, Shelley travels to schools around the country where she covers a variety of topics--from whale watching to where her ideas come from. Gill was a founder and publisher of the Paws IV line of Alaskan children's books now owned by Sasquatch Books. The author lives in Homer, AK.

Love variations on classic stories. After I traveled to Alaska, I wanted to read this one to my K class. They loved it.

I saw this book in the shops in Alaska and wanted to purchase them so I could share our trip to Alaska with our Grandchildren. But the books were pricey and I had to consider weight and space in our luggage returning home. I was glad to find this book on used and reasonably priced.

Good reading for three year old and details provided for older children

I loved this beautiful book.

Great story and illustrations!

Kids like it a lot.

Alaska's Three bears. Granddaughters loved it. One has a thing for polar bears. Having both the story and the science is neat.

Very Cute
