Way too large (paper size) to use in a car. Very difficult to use, even when spread flat on a large table for planning purposes. I've used several of the Michelin Maps and will abandon this map for a more useful scale and size Michelin version.

This is a large, two-sided map. It is somewhat difficult to fold/unfold in the car, but the large size allows for enough detail for it to be useful. Without a GPS, it was a necessity.

AS SOON AS I UNFOLDED THE MAP, IT RIPPED IN TWO AREAS ALONG THE FOLD CREASE. LOOKS TOO BIG TO UNFOLD IN A SMALL VEHICLE. GOOD TO UNFOLD ON A LARGE TABLE.

This map has an extraordinary level of detail, although some indications may be wrong, as indicated by a previous reviewer. On the negative side, it is very large and therefore really unwieldy for use in a car. It would be good for route planning in your room the night before driving, but you would then need to fold it so that only the area you are driving is exposed, and everything else is folded behind. My sister used this on a recent trip through these two countries, and also found it too big to use comfortably when riding in a car.

This map should be used with some caution. Some of the road numbers do not match up or are not clearly marked in person. Also the projected roads make the map a little confusing as they do not currently exist. We used this map as well as Google Maps online and never got too lost.
